

August 18, 2009

As I walked out of the coffee shop this morning after my latest fundraising appointment, I found myself speechless before God! I could only humbly and gratefully acknowledge Him for His perfect timing. Not only had the woman I was meeting with happily agreed to help support my ministry, but she had opened up her heart to me as well. I learned that she had been experiencing a difficult trial in her life through which, she told me, our Faith@Work luncheons had been a real blessing to her. As she shared, it also became clear that she had never had the opportunity to grow in Christ through a Bible Study. When I suggested we do something about that, she was excited!

God blessed me so much during my time with her this morning. He took an appointment I had intended for one purpose and accomplished much more. I sat in my car, before driving out of the parking lot, and prayed, "What a privilege it is, Lord, to be employed by You!"

Unexpected opportunities are one of the benchmarks of my ministry with The Navigators. At every turn I see God giving me new ways to serve Him.

Another such opportunity recently came by way of an invitation to help mentor some new Navigator college staff at a training summit in Colorado Springs. There I met an amazing group of young people who were preparing to serve God on college campuses all over the country. We shared stories, prayed together and heard some great teaching during the five days I was there. I can't wait to hear how God uses them in their new calling!

Practicing street evangelism with new Navigator collegiate staff in Manitou Springs

Sarah and I prayed together for her new ministry at Bowie State University in Maryland

Pray for these young people, as they reach out to the next generation, that God's kingdom will be advanced. As for me, pray that I will never miss the unexpected opportunities He puts before me and that He will provide for every need along the way. Thank you so much! Your ongoing partnership with me is a vital part of my ministry. I am very grateful for your prayers and your support.

Together in Him,

Karen Warin